An economic classification unit shall be determined as a group of similar economic activities based on the following three criteria, in order of priority:

a) The production process of the economic activity;

b) The input materials used by the economic activity to produce its products;

c) The characteristics of the output products of the economic activity.

Article 3. Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities

1. The Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities shall ensure comprehensive reflection of all economic activities conducted within the territory of Vietnam and shall ensure international comparability. The Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities consists of:

a) The List of Economic Activities of Vietnam (Appendix I attached hereto);

b) The Content of Economic Activities of Vietnam (Appendix II attached hereto).

2. Basic structure and coding method of the Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities

The Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities consists of 5 hierarchical levels:

a) Level 1 includes 22 sections, designated alphabetically from A to V;

b) Level 2 includes 87 divisions, corresponding to Level 1 sections, each assigned a 2-digit code ranging from 01 to 99;

c) Level 3 includes 259 groups, corresponding to Level 2 divisions, each assigned a 3-digit code ranging from 011 to 990;

d) Level 4 includes 495 classes, corresponding to Level 3 groups, each assigned a 4-digit code ranging from 0111 to 9900;

dd) Level 5 includes 743 subclasses, corresponding to Level 4 classes, each assigned a 5-digit code ranging from 01110 to 99000.

3. The Vietnam Standard Industrial Classification of Economic Activities clarifies economic activities with factors arranged in each classification unit, comprising:

a) Inclusion: Economic activities identified as belonging to the classification unit;

b) Exclusion: Economic activities not included in the classification unit but classified elsewhere.
